

Judge considers nuclear fuel dispute

State suing federal government about plutonium project

BY MEG KINNARD
The Associated Press

COLUMBIA — It's now up to a federal judge to decide if South Carolina's lawsuit against the federal government about an unfinished plutonium processing project should be dismissed, or if the state's pursuit of millions of dollars in fees should move forward.

During a hearing in federal court in Columbia, attorney Randy Lowell said that the law is clear that the government owes South Carolina millions of dollars in fees and also must remove plutonium from the state because the processing plant wasn't operational on time.

"All of this is a problem of their own creation," Lowell, representing the state, said during a 90-minute hearing.

South Carolina in February sued the U.S. Department of Energy about the mixed-oxide fuel project at the Savannah River Site, a sprawling former nuclear weapons plant along the South Carolina-Georgia border. The multi-billion-dollar project was intended to help the United States fulfill an agreement with Russia to dispose of at least 34 metric tons apiece of weapons-grade plutonium, an amount that's enough for about 17,000 nuclear warheads.

The plant is years behind schedule and billions over budget. Because the facility wasn't operational by a Jan. 1, 2016, deadline, the federal government was supposed to remove 1 metric ton of plutonium from South Carolina or pay fines of $1 million a day — up to $100 million yearly — until either the facility meets production goals or the plutonium is taken elsewhere for storage or disposal.

Lowell argued that the government

Project to relocate Hamptons begins

Restaurant moving to old Burns Hardware building on Main Street

BY ADRIENNE SARVIS
adrienne@theitem.com

The project to relocate Hamptons restaurant to Main Street kicked off on Wednesday with the demolition of the facade at the old Burns Hardware Store at 35 N. Main St.

The project involves demolishing the facade of that building; demolishing the building at 4 E. Hampton Ave.; moving Hamptons to 33 N. Main St., the former location of Angel's Mexican Restaurant; and creating an outdoor venue in the space between Jin Jin Chinese Restaurant and Sumter Opera House.

Danielle Thompson, co-owner of Hamptons, said the move will ensure that Hamptons remains a downtown destination.

Being closer to Sumter Opera House and the upcoming Hyatt hotel will provide a larger customer base as well as add to the other downtown renovations, she said.

Decorated WWII veteran remembered for smiling personality

U.S. Army retired Col. William Evans Reynolds Sr., 98, who landed on the beaches of Normandy several days after D-Day and supported the efforts in the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, died on Tuesday at his home in Sumter.

He was the husband of Doris Edleman Reynolds for more than 70 years.

Described as having a warm smile, loving generosity, strong faith and positive view of life, Reynolds served with the U.S. Third Army, as part of the 841st Ordnance Depot in Europe during some of the world's most trying times in 1944 and 1945.

Reynolds was recommended for the Bronze Star for meritorious achievement by his commanding officer, said his son, William Evans Reynolds Jr.

"He was a tremendous role model who was always smiling and upbeat," Reynolds Jr. said.

Kenneth R. Young Jr., his longtime friend and attorney, described him as "one of the fathers of the neighborhood."

Young was one of Reynolds' neighbors in the West Haven neighborhood of Sumter, which he described as a close-knit community.

"He was always smiling and always had the time to hear how your day was going," Young said.

REYNOLDS

Carl Andrews, an Amedisys Home Health and Hospice Care nurse who assisted Reynolds for the last few years, described him as a people person, who left a positive mark on anyone he met.

"He really had remarkable stories of his experience in the war," he said. "And he admired the ground that his wife walked on."

Andrews said Reynolds once showed him a picture of a Jeep in World War II on which he had painted his wife's name.

Born in Augusta, Georgia, Reynolds grew up in Florence and moved to Sumter in the late 1930s. He attended Clemson College (today Clemson University), and after a year of studies joined the Merchant Marines.

For one year, he worked and toured the world with the Merchant Marines.

He then enlisted in the Army and served as a second lieutenant in Gen. George Patton's Third Army.

He was sent to the European theater in 1944.

The 841st was dubbed the "Lucky Forward," and its job was to keep the Third Army supplied and equipped.

He was called back to active duty during the Korean War. Reynolds retired as a full colonel from the U.S. Army Reserves in 1977, after 36 years of service.

Reynolds worked for the U.S. Postal Service, retiring in 1977, and was a charter member of Aldersgate United Methodist Church.

Funeral services for Reynolds will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday at Aldersgate United Methodist Church.

Sumter man charged after hammer attack

Sumter County Sheriff's Office arrested a 34-year-old man on Wednesday for allegedly striking another man in the head with a hammer in September.

According to a sheriff's office news release, Donald Antonio Young, of 1128 Cherryvale Drive, hit the victim in the head with a hammer, causing a large laceration on his forehead, while at a residence in the 1000 block of Cherryvale Drive on Sept. 11, 2015.

The victim was transported to Palmetto Health Richland for treatment for his brain swelling and later identified Young during a South Carolina Law Enforcement Division lineup.

Young is charged with first-degree assault and battery and is being held at Sumter-Lee Regional Detention Center, awaiting a bond hearing.

Calhoun County coroner charged with pointing gun

COLUMBIA — State agents said they have arrested the Calhoun County coroner after he used his badge and gun to intimidate boaters racing on the Congaree River last year.

The State Law Enforcement Division said 61-year-old Donnie Porth isn't licensed to carry a concealed weapon and the county has no policy about the coroner carrying a gun.

Agents said Porth agreed to confront the racing boaters in June 2015 after they came close to children. He had on a swimsuit and attached his coroner's badge to a T-shirt.

Porth is charged with misconduct in office and presenting a firearm, which is a felony. He didn't return a message.

Storms shouldn't douse holiday plans

BY JIM HILLEY
jim@theitem.com

The Fourth of July extended weekend is just about upon us, and holiday revelers can probably go ahead and plan their picnics, barbecues and fireworks fun; but they may want to keep an umbrella or canopy handy.

Rain will be possible each day during the holiday weekend, but the thunderstorms should not last long enough to wash away people's plans, according to Jeff Linton, a forecaster at National Weather Service in Columbia.

"There is going to be a chance (of rain) mainly in the afternoon and evenings," Linton said.

He said it would be difficult to predict exactly when and where showers might pop up.

"It's one of those periods when there will be a 30- to 40-percent chance," he said.

While the storms aren't expected to move too quickly, they still should last only an hour or two, he said.

"I don't think there are going to be any total washouts," he said. "People just need to remember there is a possibility of storms."

Linton said highs should be in the middle 90s and lows in the middle 70s.

Attorney says legislature flunked school funding test

BY JAMIE SELF
The State

State lawmakers' efforts this year to improve public schools amounted to "tinkering around the edges without offering meaningful remedies," an attorney representing poor, rural school districts said.

Carl Epps, a Nelson Mullins attorney representing school districts that sued the state in 1993 for more support, was critiquing an update state lawmakers filed Wednesday with the S.C. Supreme Court.

The report, outlining the steps that lawmakers took this year to improve public schools, cited more than $100 million in new state spending in the districts that sued the state. That spending, in the state budget that starts today, includes more money for teacher pay raises, technology and technical assistance and teacher recruitment efforts for rural districts.

State lawmakers agreed this year to spend more than $300 million in added money on education for all school districts.

Gov. Nikki Haley, who backed the initiatives in her executive budget, also submitted an update to the court, outlining her push for more state spending on students living in poverty, technology and reading coaches, among other initiatives.

The Supreme Court ordered an update from S.C. leaders after ruling in 2014 that public schools did not provide children in poor, rural schools the quality of education guaranteed by the state Constitution. That ruling came in response to a 1993 lawsuit brought by more than 30 poor, rural districts against the state.

In their update, House Speaker Jay Lucas, R-Darlington, and Senate President Pro Tempore Hugh Leatherman, R-Florence, also outlined meetings of task forces in the House and Senate to examine the state of public education.

The House panel produced a report with dozens of recommendations that led to eight bills, four of which became law this year.

Two of the newly passed laws redefined what a S.C. high-school graduate should know and be able to do and called for a survey aimed at identifying ways to entice new teachers to work in rural, low-income districts.

Two other new laws codify efforts already underway at the S.C. Department of Education under the leadership of Superintendent Molly Spearman. The laws require the department to provide technical assistance to struggling districts and to maintain an office that reviews and assists lower-performing districts.

But the bill that stood to make the biggest effect on poor schools did not pass.

First pitched by Haley in January, the proposal called for spending $200 million in state money to help districts pay to renovate and rebuild aging school facilities. The House passed the bill, but it died in the Senate as the clock ran out on the legislative session.

Lucas and Leatherman did not promise to pass that bill next year. But they did say the effort to improve public education is ongoing. "The Senate and the House are mindful of the mandate from the court and are working diligently to improve the educational system for the benefit of all students."

The court ordered an update from state leaders after ruling in 2014 that the state's public schools did not provide children in poor, rural school districts the quality of education guaranteed by the state Constitution.

That ruling came in response to a 1993 lawsuit brought by more than 30 poor, rural districts against the state.

Epps said the update that legislative leaders filed with the court Wednesday "confirms what we already know."

"The Senate and the House held a number of committee meetings and received a lot of valuable information from highly qualified and talented people explicitly describing these children's plight and what needs to be done to offer them an education."

But, he added, the time for major reforms is overdue.

"A 7-year-old second-grader who was in one of the impacted schools is now 30," Epps said. "Another generation of children now takes their place."

Myrtle Beach motorists will feel police sirens

MYRTLE BEACH — Motorists in Myrtle Beach will soon literally be able to feel the heat.

The Sun News of Myrtle Beach reported Police Chief Warren Gall said his department will soon be installing new sirens called “howlers.” Gall said the new low-frequency sirens and normal sirens should keep motorists safer when police cars are rushing to a call.

He said the new sirens send a vibration that drivers can literally feel in the same way one can feel the vibration from a passing car playing a thumping bass line on a stereo.

Gall said the new sirens should make drivers more aware of what’s happening around them. They are being paid for with a $30,000 Justice Department grant.

River near zoo had high bacteria levels

COLUMBIA — Riverbanks Zoo in Columbia said it’s found high bacteria levels in the nearby Saluda River.

The State newspaper reported that bacteria levels high enough to make people sick were found in the river near the zoo.

Riverbanks uses water from the river only for irrigation of plants and ponds where four elephants and 40 flamingos live. There is no indication the animals have been sick.

Drinking water at the zoo comes from a municipal water supply. Most of the animals drink treated water.

Director Satch Krantz said the zoo began testing water in the river after reports that high bacteria levels were found in the Saluda Shoals Park several miles upstream from the zoo.

Turkish authorities identify suicide bombers

43 die in attack on airport in Istanbul

ISTANBUL (AP) — The three suicide bombers who attacked Istanbul airport were a Russian, an Uzbek and a Kyrgyz, a senior Turkish official said Thursday, hours after police carried out sweeping raids across the city looking for Islamic State suspects. Tuesday’s gunfire and suicide bombing attack at Ataturk Airport killed 43 people and wounded more than 230 others.

The day opened with police conducting raids on 16 locations in Istanbul, rounding up 13 people suspected of having links to the Islamic State group, the most likely perpetrator of the attack at one of the world’s busiest airports. The manhunt spanned three neighborhoods on the city’s Asian and European sides.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity in line with government regulations, did not name the attackers.

“A medical team is working around the clock to conclude the identification process,” the official told journalists, noting that extensive soft-tissue damage had complicated efforts to identify the attackers. The official could not confirm

A young girl joins family members and friends during funeral prayers in Istanbul on Wednesday for Gulsen Bahadir, 28, a Turkish Airlines flight attendant killed Tuesday in the blasts at Ataturk Airport. Suicide attackers killed dozens and wounded more than 230 at Istanbul’s busy Ataturk Airport late Tuesday, the latest in a series of bombings to strike Turkey in recent months.

Turkish media reports that the Russian national was from the restive Daghestan region. From the start, Turkish authorities have said all information suggests the attack was the work of IS, which this week boasted to have cells in Turkey, among other countries.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility by the militant group, which used Turkey as a crossing point to establish itself in neighboring Syria and Iraq. The group has repeatedly threatened Turkey in its propaganda publications.

Interior Minister Ekan Ala said 43 people were killed in the attack, including 19 foreign nationals. Of those who were wounded, 94 remained in the hospital, the Istanbul Governor’s office reported.

Unconfirmed details of the attack continued to emerge on Turkish media.

The private Dogan news agency said the Russian attacker had entered the country one month ago and left his passport in a house the men had rented in the neighborhood of Fatih.

The Karsi newspaper, quoting police sources, said the trio was part of a seven-person cell who entered Turkey on May 25. The assailants raised the suspicion of airport security on the day of the attack because they showed up in winter jackets on a summer day, several media reported.

The Dogan news agency broadcast footage of the Istanbul police raids. It showed a special forces police team entering a building carrying what appeared to be a steel shield to protect from possible counterattack during the raid.

FDA questions hand sanitizer safety

BY MATTHEW PERRONE
AP Health Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials want to know whether hand sanitizers used by millions of Americans work as well as manufacturers claim — and whether there are any health risks to their growing use.

The Food and Drug Administration is asking for new studies on how the antiseptic gels and rubs fight germs and get absorbed into the body, with a particular focus on children and pregnant women. The proposal unveiled Wednesday is part of an ongoing government effort to review decades-old chemicals that have never had a comprehensive federal review.

Agency officials stressed that the review “does not mean the FDA believes these products are ineffective or unsafe.”

Hand sanitizers have become nearly ubiquitous during the last 20 years, offered in workplaces, schools, restaurants and other public spaces to reduce the spread of germs. Since 2009, about 90 percent of sanitizers sold to the public have included either ethanol or ethyl alcohol, according to agency officials.

Under current regulations, manufacturers can make broad claims about their products’ effectiveness in killing germs. Bottles of Purell hand sanitizer, for example, say: “Kills 99.99 percent of illness-causing germs.”

FDA regulators suggested they may tighten such claims after reviewing the information submitted by manufacturers.

“We’re not trying to alarm people,” said Dr. Janet Woodcock, director of the FDA’s drug center. “Obviously ethanol and humans have co-existed for a long time, so there’s a lot that’s known about it.”

But the agency has concerns about the possible long-term consequences of frequent use by children and women of child-bearing age, particularly those who are pregnant or breast feeding. The agency’s proposal would require manufacturers to study whether three anti-germ ingredients — ethanol, alcohol and a type of chloride — show up in blood or urine after repeated, daily use. That could mean that the chemicals may be affecting the reproductive system or the production of hormones.

Regulators are also concerned about possible links between use of antiseptic chemicals and the emergence of so-called superbug bacteria, which are resistant to antibiotics.

“We need to get this additional information so if there are situations where caution is warranted, we can label that or inform the public,” Woodcock said.

The American Cleaning Institute, a cleaning products trade organization, said it thinks the FDA already “has a wealth of data on hand sanitizers in their possession to judge them as generally recognized as safe and effective.” But the group said it would work to provide the information.

Hand sanitizer is seen on a shelf at a pharmacy in Plano, Texas, in 2009. Federal health officials want to know whether hand sanitizers are effective and safe.

NASA spacecraft nears Jupiter to study planet

Juno will map interior, take detailed photos

BY ALICIA CHANG
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES — Jupiter takes center stage with the arrival next week of a NASA spacecraft built to peek through its thick, swirling clouds and map the planet from the inside out.

The solar-powered Juno spacecraft is on the final leg of a five-year, 1.8 billion-mile voyage to the biggest planet in the solar system.

Juno promises to send back the best close-up views as it circles the planet for a year. Jupiter is a gas giant made up mostly of hydrogen and helium, unlike rocky Earth and its neighbor Mars. The fifth planet from the sun likely formed first, and it could hold clues to how the solar system developed.

THE ARRIVAL

As Juno approaches Jupiter late Monday, it will fire its main rocket engine to slow down and slip into orbit around the planet. This carefully orchestrated move, all preprogrammed, is critical because Juno will zip past Jupiter if it fails to brake. The engine burn — lasting about a half hour — is designed to put Juno on a path that loops over Jupiter's poles.

Because it takes 48 minutes for radio signals from Jupiter to reach Earth, mission controllers at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory won't be able to intervene if something goes awry. They'll watch for beeps from Juno that'll signal whether the engine burn is going as planned.

THE MISSION

Spacecraft have visited Jupiter since the 1970s, but there are still plenty of questions left unanswered. How much water does the planet have? Is there a dense core? Why is its signature Great Red Spot — a hurricane-like storm that has been raging for centuries — shrinking?

During the mission, Juno will peer through Jupiter's dense clouds, flying within 3,100 miles, closer than any other spacecraft.

Earlier visitors included the Voyagers and Pioneers, Galileo, Ulysses, Cassini and most recently, New Horizons, which reached Pluto last year. Most were quick flybys en route to other destinations. Only Galileo — named for the Italian astronomer who discovered Jupiter's large moons — orbited the massive planet and even released a probe.

THE SPACECRAFT

Named after the cloud-piercing wife of the Roman god Jupiter, Juno carries nine instruments to map Jupiter's interior and study its turbulent atmosphere. Also stowed aboard are three mini figures of Jupiter, Juno and Galileo designed by the Lego Group. The Italian Space Agency donated a plaque inscribed with Galileo's writings.

Previous trips to Jupiter have relied on nuclear power because of the distance from the sun. Juno is the first spacecraft to venture this far out on solar power. Juno, about the size of an SUV, has three tractor-trailer-size solar wings that extend outward like blades from a windmill. The solar panels are designed to face the sun during most of the mission.

After its launch on Aug. 5, 2011, Juno took a roundabout journey to Jupiter, swinging around the inner solar system and using Earth as a gravity boost to the outer solar system.

THE PICTURES

The Hubble Space Telescope and other spacecraft have returned stunning pictures of Jupiter, including a new photo released Thursday of its northern lights. But scientists said the best views are yet to come. Juno will get in closer and will provide the most detailed look at the planet's polar regions, clouds and auroras.

The camera onboard — the JunoCam — has been snapping pictures of Earth, Jupiter and its moons along the way. But the camera and other instruments were turned off this week to avoid any interference during the critical arrival.

Syfy's ‘Killjoys,’ ‘Dark Matter’ both return tonight

BY KEVIN McDONOUGH

A series called “The Celebrity Adventure Club” (11 p.m., Travel, TV-G) just had to happen. “Club” asks the famous what inspires and excites them.

First up, Jon Cryer (“Two and a Half Men”) gushes about his affection for manned space exploration and visits space centers in Houston, Washington, D.C., and the former Soviet Union.

• “Mysteries at the Museum” (9 p.m., Travel, TV-PG) premieres its 11th season with a visit to an institution dedicated to one of history’s deadliest plagues.

• An exercise in cringe-worthy humor that plunges into controversial waters, churns them and asks viewers to endure maximum discomfort, the “Adult Swim” (midnight, Cartoon Network, TV-MA) offering “Brett Gelman’s Dinner in America” defies easy categorization.

Shot like a film with multiple cameras capturing the reaction of dining partners, “Dinner in America” appears to be a civilized talk show with a dinner party gimmick. Gelman tries to get the conversational ball rolling only to hijack the discourse with conversation-stopping and revealing asides. He basically plays a wildly exaggerated and dreadful version of himself, the most tone-deaf, arrogant person imaginable.

Tonight’s “Dinner in America” features Gelman’s efforts to discuss race in America with Loretta Devine (“The Carmichael Show”), Shareeka Epps (“Half Nelson”), Joe Morton (“Scandal”) and Mack Wilds (“The Wire”). Awkward does not begin to describe the dinner party.

• Set in the world of intergalactic bounty hunters, the Canadian space adventure “Killjoys” (9 p.m., Syfy, TV-14) returns for its sophomore season, as does “Dark Matter” (10 p.m., SyFy, TV-14), also from Canada.

• The historical epic “Marco Polo” also returns for a second season. All 10 episodes of the new season stream on Netflix beginning today.

STEVE WILKIE / SYFY / KILLJOYS II PRODUCTIONS LIMITED

Hannah John-Kamen stars as Dutch in the “Dutch and the Real Girl” season two premiere episode of “Killjoys,” airing at 9 p.m. today on Syfy.

• “Vice” (11 p.m., HBO, TV-14) looks at the new space race involving private companies with their eyes on Mars.

• Starz kicks off July with three James Bond movies, beginning with “Dr. No” (7 p.m.) from 1962. “Goldfinger” (8:55 p.m.) follows, along with “For Your Eyes Only” (10:50 p.m.).

TONIGHT’S OTHER HIGHLIGHTS

• The U.S. Olympic Trials (NBC) continue with swimming (8 p.m.) and track and field (9 p.m.).

• Discovery’s Shark Week offerings include “Deadliest Sharks: Sharkopedia Edition” (8 p.m., TV-PG), “Shark Bait” (9 p.m., TV-PG) and “Blue Serengeti” (10 p.m., TV-PG).

• Now in its sixth season, “The Great British Baking Show” (9 p.m., PBS, TV-PG, check local listings) asks non-professionals to create classic confections.
• Danny must answer for his partner on “Blue Bloods” (10 p.m., CBS, r, TV-14).

SERIES NOTES

A brother in need on “NCIS: Los Angeles” (8 p.m., CBS, r, TV-14) * The competition intensifies on “Home Free” (8 p.m., Fox, r, TV-14) * A teen and a former soap star pitch ideas on “Shark Tank” (8 p.m., ABC, r, TV-PG) * Dean Cain hosts two episodes of “Masters of Illusion” (8 p.m. and 8:30 p.m., CW, r, TV-14) * Twice the danger at Anika Noni Rose and Joanna Newsom appear on “Jimmy Kimmel Live” (11:35 p.m., ABC, r) * Aubrey Plaza, Samira Wiley, Neil Gaiman and Ray Luzier visit “Late Night With Seth Meyers” (12:35 a.m., NBC, r) * Anna Paquin, John Cena and Fleur East appear on “The Late Late Show With James Corden” (12:35 a.m., CBS, r).

CULT CHOICE

A dashing rogue (Clark Gable) woos a spoiled plantation beauty (Vivien Leigh) who has married and buried two husbands in the 1939 romance “Gone With the Wind” (9:15 p.m., TCM), a hugely successful book and film reflecting widely held myths about the Civil War and Reconstruction.

Sovereign kingdom or little England?

WASHINGTON — Given their arrogance, pomposity and habitual absurdities, it is hard not to feel a certain satisfaction with the comeuppance that Brexit has delivered to the unaccountable European Union bureaucrats in Brussels. Nonetheless, we would do well to refrain from smug condescension. Unity is not easy. What began in 1951 as a six-member European Coal and Steel Community was grounded in a larger conception of a united Europe born from the ashes of World War II. Seven decades into the postwar era, Britain wants out, and the EU is facing an existential crisis.

Give the EU its due. Despite its comical faux-national paraphernalia of flag, anthem and useless parliament, it has championed and advanced a transnational idea that has helped curb the nationalist excesses that culminated in two world wars.

Advanced not quite enough, however. Certainly not enough to support its disdainful, often dismissive, treatment of residual nationalisms and their democratic expressions. Despite numerous objections by referendum and parliament, which it routinely either ignored or circumvented, the EU continued its relentless drive for more centralization, more regulation and thus more power for its unelected self.

Such high-handed overriding of popular sentiment could go on only so long. Until June 23, 2016, to be precise.

To be sure, popular sentiment was rather narrowly divided. The most prominent disparity in the British vote was generational. The young, having grown up in the new Europe, are more comfortable with its cosmopolitanism and have come to expect open borders, open commerce and open movement of people. They voted overwhelmingly — by 3 to 1 — to Remain. Leave was mainly the position of an older generation no longer willing to tolerate European assaults on British autonomy and sovereignty.

Understandably so. Here is Britain, inventor of the liberal idea and home to the mother of parliaments, being instructed by a bunch of pastry-eating Brussels bureaucrats on everything from the proper size of pomegranates to the human rights of terrorists.

Widely mentioned, and resented, was the immigration directive to admit other EU citizens near automatically. But what pushed the Leave side over the top was less policy than primacy. Who runs Britain? Amazingly, about half of the laws and regulations that govern British life today come not from Westminster but from Brussels.

Brexit was an assertion of national sovereignty and an attempt, in one fell swoop, to recover it.

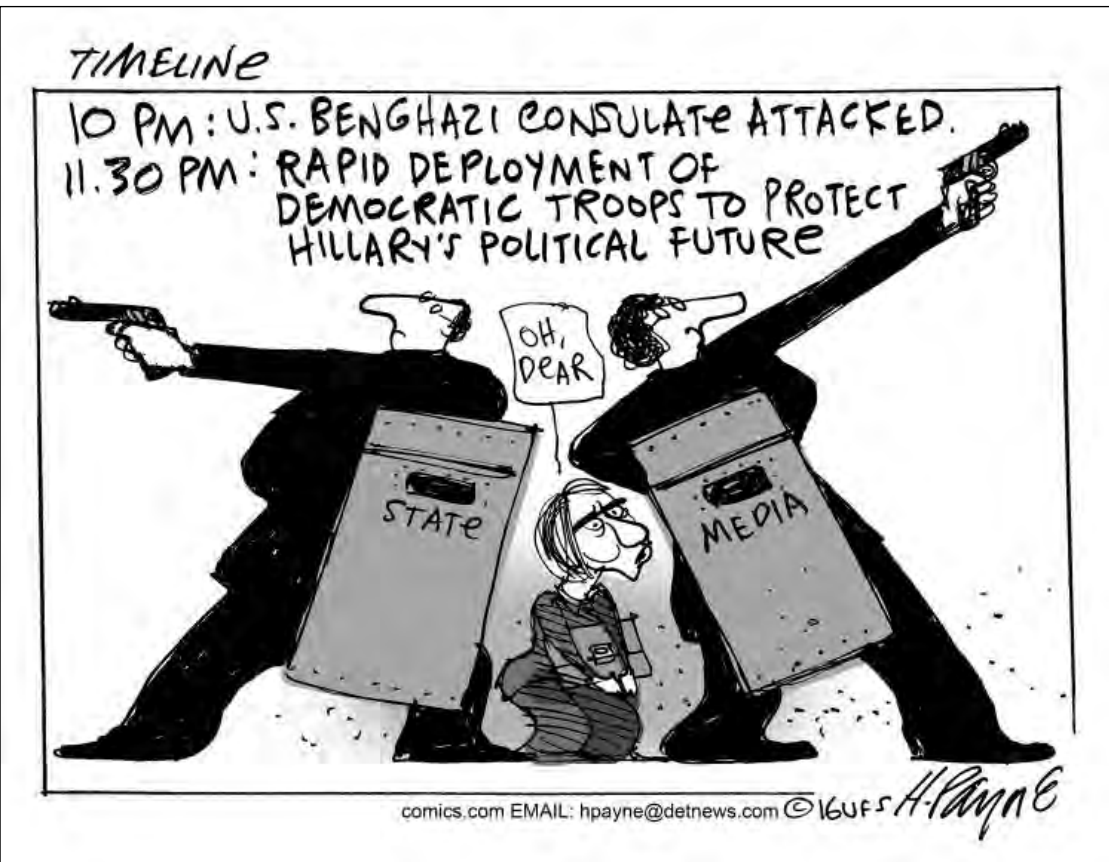

There is much to admire in that impulse. But at what cost?

Among its casualties may be not just the European project (other exit referendums are already being proposed) but possibly the United Kingdom itself. The Scots are already talking about another vote for independence. And Northern Ireland, which voted to remain in the EU, might well seek to unite with the Republic.

Talk about a great idea executed badly. In seeking a newly sovereign United Kingdom, the Brits might well find themselves having produced a little England.

COMMENTARY

Anti-Brexit elites aren't the ones who suffer from their policies

BY VICTOR DAVIS HANSON

Following the Brexit, Europe may witness even more plebiscites against the undemocratic European Union throughout the continent.

The furor of ignored Europeans against their union is not just directed against rich and powerful government elites per se or against the flood of mostly young male migrants from the war-torn Middle East. The rage also arises from the hypocrisy of a governing elite that never seems to be subject to the ramifications of its own top-down policies. The bureaucratic class that runs Europe from Brussels and Strasbourg too often lectures European voters on climate change, immigration, politically correct attitudes about diversity and the constant need for more bureaucracy, more regulations and more redistributive taxes.

But Euro-managers are able to navigate around their own injunctions, enjoying private schools for their children; generous public pay, retirement packages and perks; frequent carbon-spewing jet travel; homes in non-diverse neighborhoods; and profitable revolving-door careers between government and business.

The Western elite classes, both professedly liberal and conservative, square the circle of their privilege with politically correct sermonizing. They romanticize the distant “other” — usually immigrants and minorities — while condescendingly lecturing the middle and working classes, often the losers in globalization, about their lack of sensitivity.

On this side of the Atlantic, President Obama has developed a curious habit of talking down to Americans about their supposedly reactionary opposition to rampant immigration, affirmative action, multiculturalism, and political correctness — most notably in his caricatures of the purported “clingers” of Pennsylvania.

Yet Obama seems uncomfortable when confronted with the prospect of living out what he envisions for others. He prefers golfing with celebrities to bowling. He vacations in Martha's Vineyard rather than returning home to his Chicago go mansion. His travel entourage is royal and hardly green. And he insists on private prep schools for his children rather than enrolling them in the public schools of Washington, D.C., whose educators he so often shields from long-needed reform.

'The tax-paying middle classes, who lack the romance of the poor and the connections of the elite, have become convenient whipping boys of both ...'

In similar fashion, grantees such as Facebook billionaire Mark Zuckerberg and Univision anchorman Jorge Ramos do not live what they profess. They often lecture supposedly less-sophisticated Americans on their backward opposition to illegal immigration. But both live in communities segregated from those they champion in the abstract.

The Clintons often pontificate about “fairness” but somehow managed to amass a personal fortune of more than $100 million by speaking to and lobbying banks, Wall Street profiteers and foreign entities. The pay-to-play rich were willing to brush aside the insincere, pro forma social-justice talk of the Clintons and reward Hillary and Bill with obscene fees that would presumably result in lucrative government attention.

Consider the recent Orlando tragedy for more of the same paradoxes. The terrorist killer, Omar Mateen — a registered Democrat, proud radical Muslim and occasional patron of gay dating sites — murdered 49 people and wounded even more in a gay nightclub. His profile and motive certainly did not fit the elite narrative that unsophisticated right-wing American gun owners were responsible because of their support for gun rights.

No matter. The Obama administration and much of the media refused to attribute the horror in Orlando to Mateen's self-confessed radical Islamist agenda. Instead, they blamed the shooter's semi-automatic .223-caliber rifle and a purported climate of hate toward gays.

Many Americans were bewildered by the logic. It's reasonable to conclude that the shooter was conflicted about his religion's strict prohibitions about his lifestyle — and especially the American brand of tolerance as exemplified by the nightclub. Mateen's immigrant father from Afghanistan is a crude homophobe who had praised the murderous Taliban. Mateen somehow had cleared all background checks and on at least two occasions had been interviewed and dismissed by the FBI.

In sum, elites ignored the likely causes of the Orlando shooting: the appeal of ISIS-generated hatred to some young, second-generation radical Muslim men living in Western societies and the politically correct inability of Western authorities to short-circuit that clear-cut connection.

Instead, the establishment all but blamed Middle America for supposedly being anti-gay and pro-gun.

In both the U.S. and Britain, such politically correct hypocrisy is superimposed on highly regulated, highly taxed and highly governmentalized economies that are becoming ossified and stagnant.

The tax-paying middle classes, who lack the romance of the poor and the connections of the elite, have become convenient whipping boys of both in order to leverage more government social programs and to assuage the guilt of the elites who have no desire to live out their utopian theories in the flesh.

America's version of the British antidote to elite hypocrisy is the buffoonish populist Donald Trump. Like the architects of Brexit, he arose not from what he was for, but what he said he was against.

Coastal Carolina finishes Cinderella run with 4-3 win over Arizona Coastal Carolina's G.K. Young (37) is hugged by Anthony Marks after hitting a 2-run home run against Arizona in Game 3 of the College World Series finals on Thursday in Omaha, Neb. The homer gave the Chanticleers a 4-0 lead and they held on for a 4-3 victory for the program's first national title.

OMAHA, Neb. — Coastal Carolina coach Gary Gilmore often said he just wanted his team to reach the College World Series. Until this week, he never imagined the Chanticleers would do so much more: They're heading back to Conway, South Carolina, with the school's first national championship in any sport. The Chanticleers defeated Arizona 4-3 in the deciding Game 3 of the College World Series finals on Thursday, capitalizing on two errors on the same play to score four unearned runs in the

Chants prove selves to be team of destiny

BY RYAN YOUNG

OMAHA, Neb. — Gary Gilmore had said at times this postseason that he felt as if his Coastal Carolina baseball team was one of destiny. Other coaches reached out to him with similar thoughts during this incredible, inspiring and seemingly improbable run. And perhaps they were all correct. The Chanticleers capitalized on back-to-back Arizona errors in the top of the sixth inning Thursday to score four runs and break wide open what had been a compelling

Sumter, Manning begin playoffs next week

P-15's also receive automatic berth to state tournament at Riley Park

BY DENNIS BRUNSON

The Sumter P-15's and Manning-Santee Post 68 will both be in the American Legion baseball state playoffs which begin next week while Dalzell-Shaw Post 175 will miss out. However, regardless of what happens in the playoff series, Sumter has a spot secured in the state tournament, which will run from July 23-27 at Riley Park. As the host of the tournament the past two seasons, Sumter had to win its series to secure a berth in the 8-team state tourney field. That is not the case this year, according to Post 15 athletic officer Bill

Lyons. So if the P-15's lose either of their two playoff series, they'll automatically earn a spot. Should Sumter win its two series though, there will be a play-in series among the three second-round series losers for the final spot from the lower state. Sumter, which closes out its regular-season schedule today against Florence Post 1 at Riley beginning at 7 p.m., will open a best-of-5 first-round series against the No. 4 team from League VIII or at-large Beaufort on Tuesday at Riley Park. Lexington and Lower Lexington are battling for the sixth inning of a game delayed a day by bad weather. It was worth the wait. “Whenever I die, I’ll know this group of guys here, they willed themselves to be the national champion,” Gilmore said. “It was just meant to be, no doubt. If there is such a thing as a team of destiny, this group is it.” Coastal Carolina (55-18) became the first team since Minnesota in 1956 to win the title in its first CWS appearance. Arizona (49-24) was trying for its second national title since 2012 but came up just short in a season in which it was picked to finish ninth in the Pac-12. “Amazing season, and they’re a deserving champion,” first-year coach Jay Johnson said of the Chanticleers. “We played as good as we possibly could this year, and they’re the best team we’ve played, in my opinion.” Andrew Beckwith (15-1), the national leader in wins, went 5 2/3 innings after pitching two complete games and picked up his third victory of the CWS. He was named the Most Outstanding Player. “He’s been coaching for 21 years, and he deserves every bit of it,” Beckwith said of Gilmore. “We got him to Omaha and we got him a national championship. The senior class, the hard work in the fall, the dedication of the guys who don’t play much. It doesn’t go unnoticed. It was a full team effort the whole College World Series, and we got it done.” Alex Cunningham earned his first save, striking out Ryan Haug with a full-count fastball to end the game after Arizona had pulled within one in the bottom of the ninth. When Haug swung and missed, Cunningham turned to his dugout, beat his chest with his fist three times and saluted before flipping his glove away to start the celebration. “The running joke is that in high school I lost the state championship three times in a row. I was not going to lose this one, I promise you that,” Cunningham said. The championship was the first in a team sport in the 33-year history of the Big South Conference. The Big South could savor the accomplishment for only about eight hours. The Chanticleers become members of the Sun Belt Conference on Friday. “This program has been a lot better than people give it credit for,” Gilmore said. “They thought we played in a small conference and couldn’t get this done. This bunch wanted to prove everybody wrong.”

pitchers’ duel to that point, and from there they held on through a dramatic bottom of the ninth for a 4-3 win over the Wildcats in the College World Series championship game before a crowd of 18,823 at TD Ameritrade Park. The Chants (55-18) – who were down to their last strike in the NCAA regionals at N.C. State earlier this month, who won the super regionals on a walk-off single at LSU and then won five potential elimination games on the biggest stage of all – are now national champions. Coastal Carolina – a school of just more than 10,000 students, making it the a popular underdog story for fans here locally in Omaha as well as nationally – becomes the first program since Minnesota in 1956 to win the College World Series in its debut appearance and just the fourth team from outside the traditional power conferences to win it all in the past 25 years. And the dream that Gilmore brought with him to his alma mater more than 20 years ago – when the facilities and so many other factors made such a thought seem exceptionally far-fetched – is now a reality ... and then some. Gilmore worked for 21 seasons striving and grinding with the hope of one day just taking the Chants to Omaha, and then they go and win the whole thing. Simply put, it will go down as one of the greatest accomplishments and stories in college baseball history with no shortage of individual heroes as well. “To achieve what these kids did is the most amazing thing I’ve ever seen,” Gilmore said on the field afterward. “... I mean, I’m like numb, to be honest. To say Coastal Carolina, national champions. I mean, it’s got a great ring to it, but did we really think that was going to happen when we started this thing back in February? I surely didn’t. I thought we had a chance to be good, but I mean this is a sacred play to try to win. It’s been unbelievable.” Junior right-hander Alex Cunningham struck out Ryan Haug on a full-count pitch to strand runners on second and third in the bottom of the ninth and cap a dramatic final inning in which Arizona (49-24) had already scored one run and was threatening to steal the game. Instead, the Chants came streaming out of the dugout as they have a few other times already this postseason, while converging next to the pitcher’s mound in their best dogpile yet as the Coastal Carolina coaching staff embraced on its own in a group hug. “Is this insane?” Gilmore would say later while wiping his forehead after finishing his television interview. As the celebration wound down, a group of the team’s veteran leaders were asked if they had ever truly thought this was possible. A couple said yeah before senior second baseman Tyler Chadwick and junior shortstop Michael Paez smiled tellingly. “Not at 7-7 I didn’t ... We always knew we had a good team, but ...,” Chadwick said. “You never expect it,” Paez interjected. “It’s almost destiny to be able to do this,” Chadwick added.

Garbine Muguruza plays a return to Jana Cepelova during their Wimbledon singles match in London on Thursday. The 124th-ranked qualifier Cepelova won 6-3, 6-2 over the reigning French Open champion.

No. 2 Muguruza out

18 seeded players lose as sun returns to Wimbledon

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
The Associated Press

LONDON — After two days filled with rain, the sun actually made an appearance at Wimbledon on Thursday, allowing for plenty of play all around the grounds, a chance to finally conclude the first round — and several surprises, the biggest of which was French Open champion Garbine Muguruza’s exit.

No. 2 Muguruza, who reached her first Grand Slam final at the All England Club a year ago and won her first Grand Slam title less than a month ago, was one of 18 seeded players who lost on Day 4, including 11 women.

Admittedly lethargic, and displaying none of the verve or confident shotmaking she’s known for, Muguruza lasted less than an hour in the second round Thursday, beaten 6-3, 6-2 by Slovakia’s Jana Cepelova, a qualifier ranked 124th.

“My energy was not really there,” Muguruza said. “I was trying, but (it) didn’t work at all.”

That same sentiment might have been expressed by some of the other players who joined her on the way out, including No. 31 Kristina Mladenovic in a weather-delayed first-round match, and No. 7 Belinda Bencic, No. 14 Sam Stosur, No. 15 Karolina Pliskova, No. 16 Johanna Konta, No. 17 Elina Svitolina, No. 20 Sara Errani, No. 22 Jelena Jankovic, No. 30 Caroline Garcia and No. 32 Andrea Petkovic, all in second-round matches.

That group includes a Grand Slam champion (Stosur), major finalists (Errani, Jankovic), the first seeded British woman at Wimbledon since 1984 (Konta, eliminated by 2014 runner-up Eugenie Bouchard) and a top-10 player considered a possible future star of the sport (Bencic, who retired because of a left wrist injury while trailing American qualifier Julia Boserup).

There was nearly another big name gone. But No. 3 Agnieszka Radwanska, the 2012 Wimbledon runner-up, saved three match points, then took advantage when her opponent, 18-year-old Ana Konjuh of Croatia, twisted her right ankle by accidentally stepping on a tennis ball during a point. That happened at 7-all in the third set and, although Konjuh continued to play, Radwanska was able to finish off a 6-2, 4-6, 9-7 victory.

The seven seeded men who lost, all in the second round, were No. 8 Dominic Thiem, No. 13 David Ferrer, No. 16 Gilles Simon, No. 23 Ivo Karlovic, No. 25 Viktor Troicki — who launched an epic tirade at the chair umpire because of a call two points from the end of his five-set defeat — No. 26 Benoit Paire and No. 30 Alexander Dolgoplov.

Muguruza was never able to get going, making 22 unforced errors and managing to produce only nine winners.

She said she felt tired and on the verge of an illness.

She also wished she had taken more time to rest after the grueling two weeks at Roland Garros that culminated with a victory over Serena Williams in the final.

Asked whether coming into Wimbledon as the owner of a major trophy made her feel a weight on her shoulders, Muguruza replied: “No, not pressure. I think, for sure, more expectations from other people.”

Cepelova equaled her best showing at a major by reaching the third round, but this was not her first significant result. She beat Simona Halep in the first round at Wimbledon a year ago, also on No. 1 Court, and defeated Serena Williams at the Family Circle Cup in Charleston in 2014.

“Yeah,” Cepelova said, “I like to play on the big courts.”

No. 4 spot from League VIII.

The P-15’s, who are 17-3 overall, went undefeated in winning the League III title to earn the homefield advantage.

M-S is assured of a spot in the playoffs as it finished in the top four of League III. Manning could finish anywhere from a 3-way tie for second, alone or in a tie for third place or by itself in fourth based on the outcome of Thursday’s game between Post 68 and Camden Post 17 and Thursday’s game between Camden and Orangeburg Post 4.

Camden can clinch the League III No. 2 seed with a victory in either game and the homefield advantage in the first round of the playoffs. Should M-S and Orangeburg both beat Camden, that would bring about the 3-way tie for second with 6-6 marks for each of the team.

Since Dalzell finished last in League III with a 0-12 record, it didn’t gain a spot in the playoffs. The Jets, who did make the playoffs last season despite just one win, finish the year with a 1-18 mark.

Defending American Legion World Series champion Chapin/Newberry is the League III champion and will face either the League II No. 4 team or Beaufort. League II champion Florence will meet either League III No. 4 or Beaufort in the first round.

Should Sumter win its opening series, it will face the winner of the first-round series between League II No. 2 or League III No. 3.

Clemson's Watson named ACC Male Athlete of Year

CLEMSON — Clemson consensus All-America quarterback Deshaun Watson is the recipient of the McKevlin Award as the Male Athlete of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference for the 2015-16 academic year.

Notre Dame senior track star Molly Seidel won the Mary Garber Award as the top ACC female athlete.

Watson led Clemson to a 14-1 record, the ACC Football Championship, and an appearance in the College Football Playoff National Championship game. With 4,109 yards passing and 1,105 rushing, he became the first quarterback in FBS history to eclipse 4,000 yards passing and 1,000 on the ground in the same season.

MCGIRT GOES LOW IN OHIO, LEADS AT FIRESTONE

AKRON, Ohio — William McGirt opened with a 6-under 64 for a three-shot lead in the Bridgestone Invitational, as he goes for another victory in Ohio.

McGirt broke through for his first PGA Tour victory last month at the Memorial. In his World Golf Championship debut, he made six birdies and finished off his round with a 45-foot par save.

Jason Day, the No. 1 player in the world, was among those at 67.

NFL SUSPENDS UNSIGNED MANZIEL FOR 4 GAMES

DALLAS — Johnny Manziel has been suspended for the first four games of next season for violating the NFL's substance-abuse policy.

The suspension announced Thursday is not related to the NFL's domestic violence policy, but the free agent quarterback would be subject to it if he signs with another team.

Manziel, released by Cleveland in March, is facing an assault charge in Dallas involving former girlfriend Colleen Crowley. The league is reviewing that case.

YANKEES 2 RANGERS 1

NEW YORK — Chase Headley scored on a passed ball with two outs in the bottom of the ninth, and the Yankees won in their final at-bat for the second straight game to beat the Texas Rangers 2-1 on Thursday afternoon.

Four New York pitchers combined to strike out 16 Rangers as the teams split the four-game series. Didi Gregorius, who had the winning home run Wednesday night, hit a solo shot in the fifth to tie the score after Shin-Soo Choo homered to lead off the game.

Shuck's career high-tying third hit of the game scored Avisail Garcia from second base.

DODGERS 8 BREWERS 1

MILWAUKEE — Trayce Thompson, Yasmani Grandal and Corey Seager hit home runs, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers to an 8-1 win over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Kenta Maeda (7-5) held the Brewers to one run over six innings as the Dodgers won the season series five games to two.

She worked her way up to executive director of housekeeping, where she remained for 12 years. She later accepted a more impressive offer of employment as executive director of housekeeping at the Hotel Pennsylvania in Manhattan, New York, where she remained until retiring in 2003. She then returned home to Sumter to care for her mother.
